D&O Insurance

Shareholders' Friend or Foe?

Recent research demonstrates the importance of Directors' and Officers' liability insurance to securities litigation. But this same research calls into question the value of D&O insurance for shareholders.

Do shareholders need insurance protecting corporate assets when they can protect themselves by holding a diversified investment portfolio? Does D&O insurance protect shareholders by monitoring corporate governance and fighting frivolous claims? Or does D&O insurance allow managers to mislead the markets and shareholders with less fear of real consequences?

This conference brings together leaders from law and industry with academics conducting the latest research.

Attend the conference to learn about:

- The latest research on D&O insurance,
- The future of securities class actions,
- The importance of D&O insurance to public markets,
- Strategic and tactical challenges to D&O insurers in securities litigation,
- The shareholder primacy challenge to entity coverage in the D&O policy.
