Early Action Program Agreement

UConn School of Law’s Early Action Program is a binding early decision process. The Program is designed for applicants for whom UConn School of Law is their first choice. Applicants to the Early Action Program should be confident that they would enroll at UConn Law School should they be admitted under this program. All applicants to the Early Action program will receive a merit scholarship.

All applicants to the Early Action Program agree to the following:

- an Early Action applicant must enroll in UConn School of Law if accepted;
- Early Action applicants may apply to other law schools, however, once admitted through this Program, the applicant must immediately withdraw all other law school applications and cannot apply to additional law schools;
- Early Action applicants admitted to the program must decline acceptance to all other law schools;
- applicants admitted under the Program are ineligible for a deferral;
- if admitted through the Early Action Program, applicants must submit a non-refundable deposit of a $500 within fourteen (14) days of admission.

Applicants to the Early Action Program will receive a decision within fourteen days of completing their application. Candidates who are waitlisted through the Early Action Program are not bound to attend UConn Law if admitted thereafter. Candidates who are denied admission through this Program cannot re-apply through our regular admissions process.

Candidates admitted through the Early Action Program are guaranteed a merit scholarship. Although merit scholarships of varying amounts will be awarded at the time of admission, a full financial aid package will not be available until later in the admissions cycle. Should you need to review a full financial aid package (scholarships and loans) prior to making a final decision, please think carefully about whether the Early Action Program is right for you.

UConn School of Law reserves the right to provide the names of applicants admitted under this Program to other law schools. In addition, we may revoke an acceptance offer if it is found that an admitted Early Action applicant has violated the terms of this binding Program or failed to provide true and accurate information throughout the process. Please be aware that further action, including but not limited to, filing a misconduct report with the Law School Admission Council may be taken.

If you decide to apply as an Early Action candidate, please sign this form below and submit it, along with all other required application documents, via LSAC’s electronic application process.

I have read the above terms and conditions of applying under the Early Action Program and understand the stated policies and procedures. I wish to be considered as an Early Action applicant. I agree that if offered admission, I will enroll at UConn School of Law. I further agree to immediately withdraw all other law school applications from consideration and will decline any other offers of admission I may receive. I also agree to not submit any new applications to other law schools. I understand the consequences I may incur should I violate this agreement.
